MONDAY, JUNE 11, 1883.

The devil, it is stated, quotes Scripture, to suit his own purpose. Ben Butler in his recent attempt to seduce the colored people from their allegiance to the Republican party imitated his Satanic majesty's example.

THERE appears to be no reasonable doubt that Queen Victoria's health is gradually breaking up. The knee trouble has created other complications of a serious character. Her majesty is now unable to take much exercise, and as she has a drowsy tendency this in itself is a serious aspect.

KELLEY, the fifth of the Irishmen convicted of the murder of Cavendish and Burke, was hanged on Saturday. These executions have been much condemned, but they have had the effect of doing much present good in restoring quietude in Ireland. What the ulterior end may be time alone can decide.

The Irish party profess to ridicule the Pope's recent circular against illicit societies, but those who know the Irish character, know that if they are sincere in anything it is in their religion, of which the Pope is the head and corner stone. No document could be issued that could have such a beneficial effect upon Ireland. It deprived the Land League of many friends, renders it an effete organization, and has a tendency to create peace.

FROM Fort Worth comes the news that a lunatic, placed in the same cell with two other lunatics, has been killed by a fellow-prisoner. The Sheriff blames the County Commissioners for not providing proper accommodation. They are apparently somewhat better situated than in Bexar county, but what has occurred in Tarrant county may occur here any day. The Cawley murder was traceable to the want of proper provision for the keeping of the insane, and who knows but what other tragedies may arise from the same cause. The civilization of any nation, it has been said, may be told by the care it takes of the sick, the lunatic and its unfortunate poor. This is a good standard, and, judged by it, Bexar county, and indeed, the whole State of Texas, is weighed in the balance and found wanting. Why does not the city and county combine and erect a proper place for the care of the sick, insane and the poor, placing them under such circumstances that two former classes shall be cured as far and as speedily as possible. If the city and county cannot or will not do their duty in this respect why not do as they do in Europe, erect and support such an institution by voluntary contributions. In Liverpool $250,000 were raised at one meeting recently to build an hospital. Americans are none the less liberal or charitable, and if properly worked San Antonio could have an hospital creditable alike to the head and heart of her citizens.

THE DENISON SCANDAL.

The recent suicide of Miss Baylis has been the subject of considerable comment in all parts of the United States, and is one that brings home forcibly some important truths which parents and young ladies should well consider. The facts of the case are romantic, and yet it is the same old story. Four months ago Miss Baylis, the daughter of a wealthy horse dealer in Denison, went to dancing school, and there became acquainted with a young man with good personal appearance and pleasant manners, Henry Burke. The acquaintance ripened into love. They met frequently and walked out without parental hindrance. From Mr. Baylis' evidence, it would appear the parents were ignorant of the acquaintance. Recently Miss Baylis and Burke, Miss Mabel Moore and Mr. Hughes, friends of Miss Baylis, went to Sherman. The young ladies were, it is said, debauched, and returned home in a state of semi-intoxication. The neighbors then talked. Miss Baylis' mother heard of it, and spoke to her, on the subject. Soon after Miss Baylis suicided, whether remorse for her sin, or annoyance at the neighbors' talk, was the cause of this is not determined. Burke is now in jail for rape, and lynchings have been threatened. Miss Mabel Moore, after a silly attempt at suicide, skipped and Hughes followed her example. But is there no one else to blame? Melancholy though the reflection be, have not the parents in some way conduced to this sad result? What change was kept over Miss Baylis that she could go to a dancing school, there make an acquaintance, walk out with him, and then pay the visit to Sherman unchallenged but by the neighbors' talk. The fact is the Baylis' did, as many have done, and are still doing to their own cost. They allowed their daughter too much liberty. This is the mistake. What occurred at Denison could as well occur here, and those parents who value their daughter's honor will do well to watch carefully that their daughters are not led into temptation. This is the lesson taught by this episode. It also teaches that young ladies should be careful of their male acquaintances. One word in regard to Burke: He is made the scapegoat of public indignation and threats are made to lynch him. Even some papers approve of his lynching. Two wrongs will never make a right. If he had offended against the law, let him answer the law, but let him at least have a fair trial. We have no word to offer for or against him as regards his guilt. All men are innocent before the laws until proven guilty. He is charged with having deliberately plotted the ruin of Miss Baylis. This may or may not be the case. One thing is quite clear. There is nothing to prove that the disastrous affair was the result of deliberation. It may have been the result of various circumstances which have placed him in temptation under which wiser and better men have fallen. In any case let the accused have justice.
